Questions 29 through 31 are based on the following report:

Beijing (Adapted from CNN news By Jaime FlorCruz; Jan. 21, 2011) -- Summits often produce nothing more than expectations. The meeting between U.S. President Barack Obama and China's President Hu Jintao showed how different those expectations can be. From the U.S. side there was the expectation of substantive "deliverables" - diplomatic jargon for real results. From the Chinese side, there was an expectation that, by going to Washington, its standing and status abroad would be improved.

While there was little in the way of breakthroughs, in the world of summitry where perception is all, it was the meeting itself that emerged as the message. What it signaled is that, despite differences, Washington can do business with Beijing.

The two sides argued robustly but agreed politely to disagree on human rights and other contentious issues. "Each country and its people have the right to choose their own path, and should respect each other's development model," the joint statement read.

The two countries announced a batch of economic deals. They also agreed in principle to work towards "a world without nuclear weapons" and towards the resolution of the Korean and Iranian nuclear issues. But serious issues -- trade, Taiwan, Tibet, human rights, currency manipulation -- divide the two. How to judge Hu Jintao's visit? It depends on who you ask. Americans, analysts say, tend to set higher bars to measure whether a state visit is a success. It's much simpler for the Chinese.

29. What is the best title for this article?

- a) Same summit, different views
- b) Comparison between President Obama and President Hu
- c) The trade deficits between US and China
- d) Breakthroughs in the US-China summit

30. The word "contentious" does NOT mean which of the following?

- a) quarrelsome
- b) argumentative
- c) disputatious
- d) conspiratorial

31. According to the article, which one of the following is correct?

- a) The summit is successful and satisfactory
- b) Key points of this summit are on political issues.
- c) The Americans and the Chinese have different points of view.

Questions 32 through 36 are based on the following report:

Driving Under Influence of Alcohol, usually referred to as D-U-I, is one of the most frequently committed crimes in Taiwan. In fact, D-U-I is the top cause of night traffic accidents in Taiwan. According to our statistics, drunken drivers caused three out of every four deaths from vehicular accidents after 6 p.m. In all, more than three thousand persons died in D-U-I-related accidents last year in Taiwan. Very few people on this island contemplate the consequences of getting behind the wheel after a few bottles. Those killed in D-U-I-related accidents came from every social and economic background, ranging from business executives to street peddlers and from drivers to pedestrians.

32. Why is D-U-I one of the most frequently committed crime?
- a) Because everyone drinks while they are driving
 - b) Because everyone drives after they drink.
 - c) Because drunken drivers kill a lot of people.
 - d) Because D-U-I is socially wrong.
33. Who would not be concerned with this report?
- a) People who drive only during the day.
 - b) People who walk on the street.
 - c) Truck drivers.
 - d) Everyone should be concerned.
34. Who is most likely doing this report?
- a) A physician.
 - b) A law enforcement officer.
 - c) A wine merchant.
 - d) A health official.
35. The word “contemplate” is similar to:
- a) ponder
 - b) disregard
 - c) curtail
 - d) disperse
36. According to the report, which one of the following is correct?
- a) Everyone in Taiwan cares about the impact of D-U-I.

Questions 37 through 40 are based on the following passage.

(CNN; Jan. 24, 2011) -- Flooding in Australia has affected more than 3 million people, making it one of the costliest disasters in the nation, the federal treasurer said Sunday.

The cost of the damage surpasses past tragedies like major bushfires two years ago and floods in the 1970s, Treasurer Wayne Swan said. The cost of the recent flooding is much higher because of a spike in population in the state of Queensland, Swan said. "While the state's whole population in 1974 was just 2 million, more than 3.1 million people have been affected by the latest floods," Swan said.

In his first economic note of 2011, Swan said, "it's still too early to quantify the impact with any certainty at this stage." But he said there's "no question that the economic impact of these floods will be enormous." Swan said the floods have devastated crops, tourism, retail and manufacturing and have disrupted major urban areas like Brisbane.

"One of the biggest casualties is likely to be our coal exports, with many mines shut down in big coal mining regions like the Bowen Basin, and supply chains severely hampered," Swan said. "While this will be partly offset by higher prices, the loss of production will be hit much harder."

Swan said the government has already made about $227 million in disaster recovery payments to people who have been affected by the floods. "Over the coming weeks, months and years, the Commonwealth Government will be investing billions of dollars to get Queensland back on its feet," Swan said.

37. What would be the best good title for this passage?

- a) What can the tourists see in Queensland?
- b) Economic toll of "Australia Katrina"
- c) The three major floods in Queensland.
- d) Measures taken by government after the disaster.

38. According to the article, why is the cost of the flooding this time much higher than before?

- a) Because the flooding is much bigger
- b) Because the statistics are more precise nowadays.
- c) Because more people are affected this time
- d) Because they didn't know how to evaluate the damage before.
